LONDON'S NEGLECTED HERITAGE.

One of the greatest obstacles to Social Reforms in London is the crushing burden of the rates. Many a good work is stopped because there are no funds. Yet a property worth at least £20,000,000, clearly belonging to the people of London, is now secretly administered by the 1,500 members of the self-appointed "courts of assistants" of the seventy four "livery companies," the ancient trade guilds of the City of London. The total income of these companies (besides their valuable halls, plate, etc.) is at least derived mainly from land and house property in London and elsewhere. They are, indeed, among the very largest of London's ground landlords. About a quarter of this income is devoted to special charitable trusts; some good—such as schools, almshouses, pensions to the aged, etc.—but needing democratic control; and some bad, such as pauper doles, City lectureships, etc. The balance of the companies' income, about £600,000 a year, is their corporate property, and is regarded by the members as being at their own disposal. Accordingly, whilst generously contributing about half of it to various public purposes (schools, technical education, charities, etc.), they divide the rest practically among themselves: about £175,000 a year being devoted to "management and maintenance," a large portion of it paid to the 1,500 members of the respective "courts of assistants" in fees for their attendance, about £100,000 consumed in banquets, and about £60,000 in salaries of officers, etc.

This is how some of the largest and worthiest of these Companies admitted to a Royal Commission in 1879 that they spent their money:—

Summarized from Royal Commission Report, c-4973, Vol. iv. (last lines added.)

London - Guilds.

These companies formerly discharged various public functions connected with their respective trades, and were once doubtless of great public utility. Every Trading citizen, rich or poor, man or woman, could become a member, and was sometimes obliged to do so. The companies are bound to teach the trade to all who come to learn, and to infirm, and decayed out of the lands which they were by charter permitted to acquire

It need hardly be said that the companies themselves recognize no such obligations. The Goldsmiths' Company still exercises a vexatious and unnecessary "hall-marking" of gold and silver; the Fishmongers' Company still inspects and condemns stinking fish; the Apothecaries' Company maintains botanic gardens and grants inferior medical degrees; the Gunmakers' Company tests and stamps gun-barrels; and the Stationers' Company sells almanacks and maintains (most inefficiently) a register of published books. But, these, with some feeble efforts of the Plumbers, Turners, Coachmakers, and a few other companies, practically cover the surviving public services rendered in return for the magnificent public property administered by the companies

The necessity for reform has long been manifest. In 1884 a Royal Commission presented an exhaustive report, signed by such moderate reformers as the Earl of Derby, the Duke of Bedford, Viscount Sherbrooke, Lord Coleridge, and Alderman Sir Sydney Waterlow, in which they recommended the

IMMEDIATE INTERVENTION OF THE STATE

"for the purpose of (1) preventing the alienation of the property of the companies of London; (2) securing the permanent application of a considerable portion of the corporate income thence arising to useful purposes; (3) declaring new trusts in cases in which a better application of the trust income of the companies has become desirable." They also recommended that the companies should be compelled to publish accounts; that their constitution should be reorganized; and that admission to the livery should cease to confer the Parliamentary franchise (C., 4073, 1884).

But as the companies now fulfil practically no useful functions, and can no longer be made open to all London citizens, there is no reason why they should still be permitted to deal with London's inheritance. They must be dissolved, and their functions, rights, property and duties transferred to the County Council as the representative of the people of London. The first step is to pass through Parliament a bill to safeguard this public property from secret alienation, conferring upon the London County Council power to prepare a scheme for the management and distribution of the magnificent heritage of the people of London.
